

<Marine Life Rearing Log>

9 AM, September 19, 2023

Weather: Sunny

Water temperature: 18.8°C

This is a close-up of the skin of a flounder taken with an underwater camera. Black, yellow, and white chromatophores can be seen. Based on the information obtained from their eyes, flounder change their body color to match their surroundings by diffusing and contracting these chromatophores. This enables them to hide from enemies and prey on small fish.

