A year ago, the flounder were about the size of the palm of your hand and weighed about 70g. Now they are the size of an A4 sheet of paper and weigh about 500g. They are one year and seven months old. When converted to human age, it is roughly equivalent to 10 years old, which would be around the age of middle school. And, by this time next year, they will mature to weigh 1,000g and be about 50cm in length.
